PRESS RELEASE

HEBRON, NH, USA: April 15, 2012 - Goldman Collins Associates, LLC announces a new “Turn-Key” service for European companies wanting to create a business presence in the United States. Goldman Collins members have over ninety years of experience in assisting European companies interested in establishing and starting up companies in the United States. Using that experience Goldman Collins has created a process to enable European companies to establish businesses in the United States in an efficient and thorough manner.

Goldman Collins develops with the Client a detailed specification of the goals of the client and conducts a market analysis to determine the market structure including the size of the market, how to exploit the market and what share the Client can reasonably expect to acquire. Goldman Collins helps the Client determine and establish the legal structure, staffing, head count, operational functions and best location. Then Goldman Collins Associates will solicit all required legal, construction and equipment costs, and all rental, lease and/or real estate purchase costs. Goldman Collins will provide a final estimate of all establishment costs including legal and licensing fees, construction, installation and start-up costs. Goldman Collins Associates will manage the office design, procurement, construction, and installation of any required equipment including information technology, as well as recruit required staff.

Goldman Collins Associates is an International Business Consulting company formed in 2000. It specializes in mergers, acquisitions, business development, company start-ups, and business planning and analysis. Since 2000, Goldman Collins Associates has been responsible for creating American subsidiaries for two European companies and one European subsidiary for an American company; and has obtained major funding and managed a major expansion for one of the world’s leading biotechnology company specializing in ophthalmics. Our founder and Principal is Ronald W. Collins who, prior to forming Goldman Collins Associates, was President and CEO of Transtec Manufacturing Systems. Previously, he was a Divisional Vice President of the Polaroid Corporation. He established, in 1994, a European Division for a Fortune 500 company. In 1997 he formed a new high tech division of a Fortune 500 company. In 1998, he merged a European High Tech company into an American company, and sold two American companies to European investors.
